

About the Oberlin Golf Club

The 18-hole course at the Oberlin Golf Club in Oberlin, Ohio, features 6,436 yards of golf from the longest tees for a par of 72. The course rating is 71, and it has a slope rating of 124 on bentgrass. Designed by Denny Spencer, the Oberlin golf course opened in 1899.

The development of OGC has been due, in part, to the club's century-long relationship with Oberlin College. In addition to renting the college's adjacent lands, the club drew important leadership and revenue from the institution during its early stages of development. Following the construction of a new clubhouse in 1952, members sought to enlarge the course to 18 holes on approximately 70 acres adjacent and just west of the original nine. The architect and designer was Harold Paddock Sr., the prolific golf course architect from Moreland Hills Golf Course.
